Black-glazed Trefoil-Lipped ribbed Oinochoe

Apulian, Greek, 4th century BC

Terracotta
Height 20 cm

Provenance:

Acquired from David Cahn, Basel, 1997;
Ingeborg Dénes-Muhr, 1997-2017;
Private collection, Zurich, 2017-23

The spout of this elegant Attic oinochoe is molded into a trefoil shape. A high-arching handle runs from the shoulder to the back of the mouth, where it is flanked by molded concentric circles. The elegant neck is attached to a wide ribbed shoulder, the body rounded towards the stepped foot. The surface covered is a black glaze, including the conical underside of the foot.

Literature:

This is a particularly elegant example. Compare Corpus Vasorum Antiquorum, Oxford, Ashmolean 1, 1, 34, pl.(134) 42.6.
