

CORRUGATED

Works in the Corrugated Series explore the optical effects of color and perceived reality. These linear compositions are created through pouring acrylic and other liquid forms within the confines of the channels that exist in the corrugated material, creating repetitive marks and lines pulled by gravity. These reliefs investigate topographical elevations that blur the boundary between two-and three-dimensional planes.