Description

British artist David Shrigley is best known for his distinctive drawing style and works that make satirical comments on everyday objects, situations and human interactions. This colourful work on paper is a characteristic example of the artist's deadpan humor. Featuring a field of blue overlaid with repetitive curved green lines, the drawing's allure lies in its combination of pared-back design and hand-made individuality. At the top of the drawing, the bold red title 'HORRIBLE' is rendered in the artist's distinctive handwriting, evoking red pen on a student's work. This comically straightforward text invites interpretation of the scale-like forms as a 'horrible' reptilian subject, whilst offering a cutting commentary on Shrigley's deliberately imperfect aesthetic. The artist explains, "I like the personality of things being a bit half-finished, of basically having personality".

Description

British artist David Shrigley is best known for his distinctive drawing style and works that make satirical comments on everyday situations and human interactions. His quick-witted drawings and prints are typically deadpan in their humour and reveal chance utterings and snippets of over-heard conversations. This colourful work on paper is a characteristic example of Shrigley's darkly humorous practice.
